The National Centre for Australian Children’s Literature Inc is the nation’s pre-eminent and most comprehensive collection of children’s literature. Its aim is to collect and record the national development of Australian children’s literature by preserving, documenting resources and engaging the community through outreach programs and exhibitions.

It was begun in 1974 by Lu Rees, for whom the Archives is named, with the goal of collecting children’s books and information about their authors and illustrators. Now over 40 years old, the collection comprises 30,000 books in 53 different languages, authors’ papers and manuscripts, illustrators’ artworks, research files, audio recordings, photographs, theses, a reference collection, two publishers’ archives and ephemera. The Centre’s extensive website provides access to many of its collections. In 2015 an independent assessor valued it at over eight million dollars.

The Centre receives no government or other direct funding and relies on in-kind support, donations and its volunteers. In November 2012 it became an incorporated body in the ACT with the aim of establishing a Foundation to fund the Centre in perpetuity. As well as the Foundation the Centre is in urgent need of funds so that it can maintain current services.
