

3. WHO SHOULD APPLY?

The Master of Education (Capital Region Program) is specifically tailored and designed for current, practicing educators and educational leaders within this region. This post-graduate program is for practicing classroom teachers, aspiring and current educational leaders. It has been developed to allow those wishing to build on their passion and expertise within the classroom as well for those who wish to further develop their skills as current and future educational leaders on the local, national and international stage.

Applications are therefore welcomed from:

- Classroom Teachers
- Current Educational Leaders
- Aspiring and Emerging Educational Leaders

This program is for both school-based and non school-based educational professionals

To be accepted into the Master of Education (Capital Region Program) you should demonstrate:

- Commitment to the profession of education (as a committed classroom teacher, aspiring leader or current leader in school or non-school settings)
- Commitment to professional development and learning
- Commitment to participate actively in the learning during the program
- The ability to complete a master's program (evidenced by successful completion of a four year undergraduate (or equivalent) degree in education*)

AT A GLANCE

Make a difference to your career! You should apply if:

You want to be challenged and excited in your learning, be part of a cohort focussed learning approach which exposes you to leading national and international research and practice.

You wish to understand and conduct research based on contemporary theories and practices, analyse evidence and present findings in your capstone unit.

You want a program of learning that is engaging and flexible, and designed to meet your individual professional needs while comprehensively covering the learning content.

You will also need to meet the master's degree entry requirements of the university which are outlined on the How to Apply Fact Sheet.*
