About this course

Unleash your creativity with an Honours degree

If you have a keen eye for art and design, this flexible course will enable you to progress your studies – either full-time or part-time – by undertaking an academic thesis or substantial creative, design or industry-relevant piece of work related to your specialised area.

Working closely with expert supervisors, you will develop the high-level skills required for research or project-based employment, and your qualification will significantly broaden your future career prospects.

Study a Bachelor of Arts and Design (Honours) at UC and you will:

- fine-tune your knowledge base in your chosen field
- have the choice of taking three coursework units on research issues
- demonstrate an ability to apply appropriate high-level research skills
- plan, implement and document a substantial research, industry-relevant or creative project under professional academic supervision
- have the option to undertake a Work Integrated Learning project accompanied by a critical review
- have the option of completing a dissertation with guidance from expert supervisors.

Work integrated learning

As part of UC's commitment to enhancing your employability, you will have the option of undertaking a Work Integrated Learning project which will ensure you are armed with the right mix of skills and knowledge to develop an impressive portfolio to present to future employers. In the past UC Arts and Design students have connected with industry via organisations including Calvary Hospital, Guide Dogs Australia, the AIS and the National Museum of Australia.
