About this course

Get a taste for a degree in education without the full commitment

If you are looking for a pathway into a Primary or Secondary Teaching degree or have been thinking about a degree in teacher education but not sure if it's right for you, then the Undergraduate Certificate in Education could be the right solution.

Study a series of introductory units that will teach you how to facilitate the development and learning of young people. Throughout the course, you will gain the foundational knowledge and skills required in the education profession and the Australian education system. You will study the theoretical perspectives in key learning areas of literacy, science and mathematics.

After successful completion of the course you will have the knowledge and skills required to confidently step into the education environment in a variety of rewarding roles.

Alternatively, you can continue with your studies and complete a bachelor degree qualification, with full credit for the units you have completed.

This flexible short course can be completed in as little as 4 months full-time or 9 months part-time and is fully online so you can study at your own pace, in your own time.

Study an Undergraduate Certificate in Education at UC and you will:

- develop communication skills
- gain skills and knowledge on the development and learning of children
- gain insight and knowledge into how teaching and learning is undertaken in schools
- be prepared to enter a full teaching qualification.

Work Integrated Learning

The content of this course has been created by education professionals, and kept relevant and up-to-date through consistent monitoring of, and engagement with, the industry.

Students will engage deeply with their local community through partnership with schools in the capital region, while receiving access to teaching staff that deliver school-based learning, as well as high-quality mentor teachers, and excellent employment opportunities upon graduation.
