

This photograph was taken on a school trip to the Great Barrier Reef. I took this photograph to depict scuba divers as a part of the underwater landscape and to show my appreciation for the natural beauty of the area. I used a GoPro Hero 10 and float pole mount to capture this image of a moment in time. I've always had an interest in photographing the natural world which was easy to apply to my interest in scuba diving. At Canberra College, I'm fortunate enough to be apart of an outdoor education class dedicated entirely to scuba diving. In this class my skills as a diver have improved and I've had the chance to extend my photography skills as well as meet many people with similar interests to me. Another aspect of diving that's important to me is the conservation of Australia's unique underwater landscape as well as the wildlife inhabiting it. Photography has given me a way to capture the beauty and importance of wildlife and natural landscapes. That's why this image is very important to me and I take pride in my work as a photographer and diver.
